9:15 AM V Grantee Introductions

9:30 AM Telling a Science Story: Evidence-Based Strategies for Science Communication

Humans evolved to enjoy stories--and storytelling is a powerful tool for communicating science to any audience. In this interactive workshop, grantees will learn how to design their flash talks using evidence from the science of learning, with a focus on storytelling. The workshop will also include guidance on appropriate use of emotion and non-verbal cues to tell a compelling story. Throughout the workshop, grantees will be able to iterate on their flash talks and receive feedback on a practice round from a partner.

1:15 PM Effective and Impactful Lab Management

V Foundation grantee alumni and V Foundation leaders share personal experience, proven strategies, and actionable insights to help early career investigators manage labs more effectively. In this interactive panel discussion, you'll ask questions and get advice on how these experts navigate people management, HR, and financial challenges. Attendees will learn ways to motivate staff, address personnel challenges, manage financial questions, improve lab culture, and more.

2:15 PM Short Break

2:30 PM When the Problem isn't the Science

In this small group collaborative problem-solving activity, grantees will have the opportunity to discuss non-scientific challenges they are facing in their day-to-day work. Participants will reflect on their experiences, exchange perspectives, and offer practical insights drawn from their work. The activity is designed to promote cross-grantee learning, highlight common challenges, and strengthen connections across the group.

3:30 PM Cancer Collaboration Challenge: Innovation through New Perspectives

Grantees will be paired up and challenged to develop an innovative way they could work together on a collaborative research project. Pairings will be across cancer research fields, and the research idea must be one that neither individual could complete without the other. This creative, exploratory exercise will allow grantees to consider new research perspectives. Collaborations will be scored on creativity and potential impact.

- 1:00 PM Around the Table: Conversations with Business Executives and Leaders in Science

This session brings V Foundation grantees into small-group conversations with members of the V Foundation Scientific Advisory Committee (SAC), Board, and grantee alumni. Participants will engage directly with experienced scientific and business leaders to discuss what leadership looks like in practice, from building and sustaining high-performing teams to communicating clearly, navigating complexity, and making decisions under uncertainty.

Through candid discussion and Q&A, conversation leaders will share lessons learned over the course of their careers, including how they have approached difficult challenges, aligned teams around a common purpose, and balanced rigor with real-world constraints. The goal is to provide practical insight, perspective, and mentorship that grantees can carry forward in their own leadership journeys.

Where the P Meets the Value: Biostatistics That Move Science

In this session, attendees will hear from a panel of biostatistics experts. Grantees will be able to unravel all of the questions they have on the best ways to work with biostatistical experts at their institution, how and when to involve them in project design and data analysis, what biostatisticians wish you knew about their role, and how to include strong biostatistical plans in grant proposals.
